None of the many concessions the West has offered Iran have lessened the threat it poses to international peace and security. The regime has executed without due process more of its citizens per capita than any other country. It has waged grey guns and explosives have been intercepted enroute to Yemen. Hostages from Western countries have been seized, including the Belgian humanitarian aid worker, arrested and sentenced to 40 years in prison, in a successful effort by Iran to extort the release of Asadollah Assad, the convicted Iranian spy who was caught plotting a mass-casualty terror bombing of the 2018 resistance rally in Paris. Innocent Ukrainian civilians are today facing waves of lethal attacks of drones supplied by Iran to Russia.

These lawless activities have continued unabated even when the JCPOA nuclear accord was in effect. Iran still maintains the ignominious status, unbroken for nearly four decades, as the world's leading state sponsor of terrorism. Periodically, American policy officials have advised that if Iran wants acceptance in the world, it must end its aggression against the international order. Tehran has ignored these messages and continued to present the façade of a normal government, demanding international acceptance without any lessening of its malignant activities.

It is time to close ranks among the responsible countries of the world, including their governments. Let us all agree that Iran's long record of hostility and deception is unacceptable and must not be tolerated. No previous negotiation with Iran has made the world any safer from Tehran's international terrorism, proxy warfare, covert aggression, hostage taking, or blatant disregard of international norms – nor would any conceivable new agreement with this regime do so.

The Islamic Revolutionary Guard Corps (IRGC) is directly responsible for the deaths of over 600 US servicemen deployed in Iraq according to the US Department of Defense; and deadly IRGC attacks in Syria pose a continuing threat to US military personnel and contractors.
