'A powerful hope': Tens of thousands demonstrate in downtown L.A. against Iranian government

Millions in the world, inspired by protesters and allied to students, a wave of pro-democracy protests swept through the city. The protests, which began a few weeks ago at the center of the city and spread to the Los Angeles Convention Center, were held in support of the protesters and their families who were arrested by the Iranian government. The protesters said they were protesting against the Iranian government's actions.

"There's a powerful hope amongst all of us to see a free Iran," said a protest organizer. "We're not just protesting against the Iranian government, we're protesting for the Iranian people. We're protesting for the Iranian people who are being oppressed and who are being denied their basic rights."

Protesters gathered in downtown Los Angeles for a demonstration in support of the Iranian people and their families who were arrested by the Iranian government. The protesters said they were protesting against the Iranian government's actions.

The Los Angeles Convention Center is a major venue for the Iranian community and is a symbol of the Iranian presence in the city. The protesters said they were protesting against the Iranian government's actions.

opposition led Khomeini to hijack the movement and seize power for himself

Four decades later, the MEK stands atop the democratic alternative known as the National Council of Resistance of Iran (NCRI), a movement prepared to oversee Iran's transition to a modern and secular democracy. The NCRI has designated Maryam Rajvi to serve as president of a transitional government, and she in turn has presented a 20-point plan detailing the path Iran would take following its
