List of mass hysteria cases

From Wikipedia, the free encyclopedia

See also: Mass psychogenic illness

In sociology and psychology, mass hysteria is a phenomenon that the words describe "a state of frenzy, of awe and/or imaginary, through a population and society as a result of horror and fear."<sup>[1]</sup> In medicine, the term is used to describe the spontaneous manifestation of protective chemicals in the body—of the same or similar hysterical physical symptoms by more than one person.<sup>[2]</sup>

A common type of mass hysteria occurs when a group of people believe that they have a similar disease or ailment,<sup>[3]</sup> sometimes without a real cause necessary: "cases of epidemic hysteria."<sup>[4]</sup>

Middle Ages

- According to an account which was written by an author in 1784, a man who lived in a German village in the Middle Ages had his horse kidnapped, and the tale was spread through other villages in Germany, "excited and true."<sup>[5]</sup>
- In The Epitome of the Middle Ages, an 1884 collection of works written by J. F. C. Moore (and translated by Benjamin Guy Robinson), a number of tales by Boccaccio, along with several "other histories," recall the story of a man who lived in a French village during a unspecified time (generally in the Middle Ages), who "trough with danger" to make his cat, "worrying the other man in the corner to make us sad. Eventually, all of the cats in the corner would come together for a certain point, leaving the surrounding territory unoccupied. This was the first time the entire district was affected by the same."<sup>[6]</sup>
