al-Lat

From Wikipedia, the free encyclopedia

al-Lat (Arabic: اللات, romanized: al-Lāt, pronounced [al.ˤa.t]), also spelled Allat, Allatu and Alilat, is a pre-Islamic Arabian goddess worshipped under various associations throughout the entire Arabian Peninsula, including Mecca where she was worshipped alongside Manat and al-'Uzza as one of the daughters of Allah. The word Allat or Elat has been used to refer to various goddesses in the ancient Near East, including the goddess Asherah-Athirat.

Al-Lat is a prominent goddess worshipped by the people of the Arabian Peninsula. She is a fertility goddess who appears in a number of ancient sources. She also appears in Hittite writings as Ašerdū(s) or Ašertu(s). Her name is sometimes rendered Athirat in the context of her cult at Ugarit.

Latan, but she had more connections as far as Syria.^[3] The goddess is mentioned in their inscriptions. She was also worshipped alongside al-'Uzza. The presence of her cult in the region is a result of pre-Roman influence, her
