The doctrine of the Eastern church

- After the days of the great theological controversies in the Eastern churches, A.D. 325–451, the theology of these churches remained static. John of Damascus (A.D. 700–754) wrote three volumes, The Fountain of Knowledge, which summarized and formulated the theology developed by the church Fathers and the church Councils from A.D. 325 to his day. His work became the standard for the future theologians of the Eastern church.
- In A.D. 680, the Monothelite controversy was settled by the Council of Constantinople. This council decreed that Christ had not just one will but two wills, a human will and a divine will. In A.D. 787, the Iconoclastic controversy was settled by the Second Council of Nicea. This council decreed that the worship of God through images in the churches is permissible.
