The Special Rapporteur notes that the "atrocious crimes" as reported – which took place all across Iran – represent the commission of the worst and the most egregious human rights abuses of our living memory whereby high-ranking state officials connived, conspired and actively engaged to plan, order and commit crimes against humanity and genocide against the nationals of their own state. Notwithstanding the availability of overwhelming available evidence, – to this day – those with criminal responsibility for these grave and most serious violations of human rights and crimes under international law remain under control; the international community has been unable or unwilling to hold these individuals accountable. As noted by Amnesty International "the succession of atrocities in Iran is intractably linked to the impunity that has been enjoyed by the Iranian authorities since 1979, leading them to believe that they can commit human rights violations without repercussions"<sup>1</sup>. Indeed, many of the individuals implicated in these "atrocious crimes" continue to enjoy the official, governmental privileges and impunity from international justice and accountability. In other cases, principles of justice and accountability have been breached through prisoner exchanges – as has been witnessed most recently on 15 June 2024 – through the release of Hamid Nouri<sup>2</sup> who had been convicted by Swedish courts of war crimes and murder and for his involvement in the 1988 massacre.<sup>3</sup>

The tragedy of these crimes is that their survivors and witnesses remain in immeasurable grief and an undeniable victimhood presents a living testimony to these atrocities. As survivors mentioned in their testimonies to the Special Rapporteur, they are all faced with mental and psychological trauma on a perpetual basis as they search for a dignified, respectful, and humane closure to their daily suffering and pain. In innumerable cases, families of those forcibly disappeared continue to search for their loved ones, as the authorities persist in violating their rights. These victims and survivors look towards the United Nations and members of the international community for truth, justice and accountability.

Even to answer to the United Nations that the atrocities of the 1980s do not merely belong to the past...
