...by himself⁶³ or with another person the killings carried out pursuant to the rulings of these religious tribunals amount to extrajudicial executions under international human rights law or murder under international criminal law.

Within the Islamic Revolutionary Courts, Sharia Judges convicted individuals on charges based on the Quranic concepts such as kafers, munafiqs and murtads. The term religious hypocrites (monafeqin) was primarily used to classify the sympathizers and members of Mujahedin-e Khalq. Their interpretation deviated from orthodox readings of Shia Islam and was considered by the clerical rule as religious hypocrisy (nefaq), corruption (jesad), and heresy (shirk). For this reason, the Sharia judges considered the members and sympathizers of this group not simply as political opponents but rather as religious enemies. The terms (kafer) "non-believers" and (murtad) "apostate" were, primarily, used to describe the sympathizers and members of Marxist organizations and some other leftist and liberal groups. According to Sharia judges, apostates and atheists had renounced Islam and were in a religious war with Allah and the theocratic order.⁶⁵

I was arrested in September 1981 and released in September, 1989. After about two months of torture where they asked me the names of my friends and participating in a show court where there was only a mullah named Soltani and the person who tortured me, they sentenced me to two years in prison. After my two-year sentence was over, they wanted me to cooperate with them, to go to the front
