The Iran Nuclear Deal Is a Dangerous Con | Opinion

EPICURE

The geo-political policy wonks and foreign policy experts forgot the basic... entering a Middle East Souk.
If you want to bring home a Persian carpet, there are a few simple rules. First, never, ever, wave a wad of cash. Second, treat the shop owner's first three offers as opening gambits. Third, never ask the jeweler in the next stall to serve as your go-between "to get the best deal." Fourth, never, ever confirm you actually want the carpet.

But what has transpired with the sophisticates running the Iran nuclear negotiations isn't just the product of rookie mistakes by a naive tourist.
When finalized, Nuke Deal II will guarantee that the Iran's ultimate boss, Ayatollah Khamenei, can continue to crush human rights at home, and vastly increase the training and deadly arsenals of Iran's terrorist lackeys in Lebanon, Gaza, and Yemen. Tehran will continue to wield nuclear blackmail against the Gulf States, curse Israel's existence with threats of thousands of missiles raining down on military targets and civilian populations, and it will expand its spheres of influence throughout the Americas.
