Parliamentarians Emphasize Commitment to Democracy by Boycotting Son of Former Iranian Dictator

The resolute negative response of our colleagues in the European Parliament and national parliaments to the deposed Iranian dictator's son, during his two-week tour of Europe, was very encouraging and demonstrated that representatives of the people of Europe remain loyal to their democratic and human rights principles and are not lured by powerful government-backed lobbyists.

We sincerely congratulate this commitment to democracy in none of the countries Raza Pahlavi traveled to (Germany, France, England, and Belgium) did any government official, parliament speaker, foreign affairs committee head, or senior parliament members accept him, and only a few representatives with specific political meetings met with him. In the European Parliament, where a powerful publicity machine campaigned to arrange a speech for him on March 27, only three representatives attended. Many of the groups and parliamentary factions had already announced to their members that they would not participate in the session arranged for Raza Pahlavi. Secret of Iranian present in the hall during his trip were accompanying him and playing the role of spy.

The presence of the son of the former dictator of Iran, who has never condemned his father's crimes and distanced himself from them, is an insult to parliaments whose essential principle is democracy and respect for the will of the people. The parliamentarians of European countries demonstrated through their boycott of his sessions that they are not willing to tolerate such an insult.

During this tour, the son of the Shah showed that he represents nothing but himself, his father, and the odious monarchic dictatorship. In the speeches he gave in England, France, and Belgium, he presented himself as the ultimate authority to resolve issues beyond the king and the president, in a seemingly humble appearance that does not suit any job or position. This is reminiscent of the role of the Supreme Leader in the current regime and his father in the previous regime, who ruled over all political, social, and economic affairs of Iran beyond any law.

It is common knowledge that the Shah's regime was a corrupt, brutal, and oppressive regime. SD

The parliamentarians of European countries demonstrated through their boycott of his sessions that they are not willing to tolerate such an insult.

During this tour, the son of the Shah showed that he represents nothing but himself, his father, and the infamous monarchic dictatorship. In the speeches he gave in England, France, and Belgium, he presented himself as the ultimate authority to resolve issues beyond the king and the president, in a seemingly humble appearance that does not seek any job or position. This is reminiscent of the role of the Supreme Leader in the current regime and his father in the previous regime, who ruled over all political, social, and economic affairs of Iran beyond any law.

It is common knowledge that the Shah's secret police, SAVAK, was one of the most ruthless and criminal security services in the world. It was the primary force behind the repression and terror of the Shah's regime.

We sincerely congratulate this commitment to democracy. In none of the countries that Khatami visited in Germany, France, England, and Belgium did any government official, parliament speaker, foreign affairs committee head, or senior parliament members accept him, and only a few representatives with specific political mandates met with him in the European Parliament, where a powerful publicity machine campaigned to arrange a speech for him on March 3rd, only three representatives attended. Many of the groups and parliamentary factions had already announced to their members that they would not participate in the session arranged for Khatami. Scores of banners placed in the hall during his trip were accompanying him and playing the role of agitator.

In the speeches he gave in England, France, and Belgium, he presented himself as the ultimate authority to resolve issues beyond the king and the president, in a seemingly humble appearance that does not bear any job or position. This is reminiscent of the role of the Supreme Leader in the current regime and his father in the previous regime, who ruled over all political, social, and economic aspects of Iran beyond any law.

It is common knowledge that the Shah's regime was a dictatorship. All the people of Iran, and especially the women and children, suffered from its oppression. SD
