- 2. The results of persecution
- a. Christianity became widespread—"The blood of the martyrs was the seed of the church" (Tertullian). By the end of the period of persecution, perhaps fifteen percent of the people of the Roman empire were Christians.
- b. Problems concerning readmittance to the church were created—A great controversy broke out in the churches as to whether Christians who had compromised during the Decian and Diocletian persecutions should be readmitted to the church upon repentance.
- c. Canonical decisions were hastened—If Christians were willing to die rather than to surrender inspired books to the imperial
